

CONTENTS

Foreword by Herbert Girardet	6
Acknowledgements	8
Introduction and Summary	9
Chapter 1 Transforming The System	15
Principles; The State, the Market and the Citizen; The Need for a Systemic Approach; The Economy as a Circular System; Consumption, Production, Finance—An Interlocking System; Towards a One-World Economic System; From Commanding Heights to System Change
Chapter 2 A Common Pattern	29
Farming and Food; Travel and Transport; Energy; Work, Livelihoods and Social Cohesion; Local Development; Technology; Business; Health, and Law and Order; An Interim Conclusion
Chapter 3 Sharing The Value of Common Resources	41
A Restructured Tax System and a Citizen's Income; Ecotax Reform; Site-Value Land Taxation; Citizen's Income (or Basic Income); Targeting or Universality?; Towards a New Social Compact; Public Expenditure Programmes; Perverse Subsidies and the Market Economy; Should There Be Any Subsidies At All?; Lower Total Public Spending?
Chapter 4 Money and Finance	51
Damaging Effects; Transfer of Resources from Poor to Rich; Money Must Grow; Signs of a Paradigm Shift; A Single or Multiple Currency System?; Interest, Debt and Electronic Money; Financial Institutions
Chapter 5 The Global Economy	61
The Context; National Policies; Global Policies and Institutions; Trade; Finance; Restructuring Global Institutions; In Conclusion
Appendix I Some Organisations and Groups	68
Appendix II References and Bibliography	72